7 WALTER L. WALTERS,
8 Plaintiff,
9 v.
10 COUNTY OF CONTRA COSTA, et al.,
11 Defendants.

Case No. 19-cv-00702-DMR

ORDER ON MOTION TO DISMISS SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

Re: Dkt. No. 33

12 Defendants Contra Costa County (“the County”), Brian Cain, Felicia I. Tornabene, and 13 Angela Prasad move pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) to dismiss Plaintiff 14 Walter L. Walters’s second amended complaint (“SAC”). [Docket No. 33.] The court held a 15 hearing on September 26, 2019. For the following reasons, the motion is granted in part and 16 denied in part.

17 I. BACKGROUND

18 Plaintiff makes the following allegations in the SAC, all of which are taken as true for 19 purposes of this motion.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff, who is African American, is a licensed physician practicing in 20 the field of anesthesiology. [Docket No. 28 (SAC) ¶¶ 1, 11.] In 2017, he contracted with a 21 temporary staffing agency for placement at health care facilities needing temporary physicians. In 22 October 2017, the agency assigned Plaintiff to work at Contra Costa Regional Medical Center
23 (“CCRMC” or “the hospital”), a public hospital owned and operated by the County. Plaintiff 24 notified the agency that he would accept the assignment on the condition that he work only eight-25 hour shifts, Monday through Friday, from 7:00 am to 3:00 pm. Plaintiff had recently suffered an

26
27 <sup>1</sup> When reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must “accept as true all 28 of the factual allegations contained in the complaint.” Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94 (2007) (per curiam) (citation omitted).

1 illness causing him to lose 30 pounds in one month, and did not want to work long, exhausting
2 shifts while trying to learn the cause of his illness. The agency agreed “and replied it would 3 inform he hospital to schedule his shifts accordingly.” Id. at ¶¶ 5, 11.

4 Plaintiff began orientation and training at CCRMC on October 31, 2017. His first two 5 scheduled shifts were for 12 hours, contrary to his agreement with his agency. Plaintiff alleges 6 that he complained to Defendant Felicia I. Tornabene, the hospital’s medical director, telling her 7 “of his prior request to the agency to work only 8-hour shifts because of his extreme weight loss 8 and exhaustion during longer shifts.” He informed Tornabene that he suffers from inflammatory 9 bowel disease (“IBD”), and told her that due to psoriasis on his leg and “a painful ankle due to 10 surgery” he “had some difficulty walking, particularly if he had to walk or stand during long 11 shifts.” Id. at ¶ 12. “Plaintiff explained that working long shifts weakened him and caused him 12 pain.” He alleges that Tornabene “acknowledged [his] concerns, apologized, and informed him 13 she would look into the matter.” Id. Plaintiff later learned that the anesthesia department did not 14 have 7:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. shifts; it had only 10.5-hour, 12-hour, and 24-hour shifts. Id. at ¶ 13.

15 During the following weeks, Plaintiff’s IBD improved to the extent that he was able to 16 work longer shifts, and he alleges he “provided competent care to hospital patients without 17 incident or complaints during the entire term of his assignment.” However, despite his 18 conversation with Tornabene, Plaintiff learned that he was scheduled to work a 24-hour shift on 19 December 28, 2017 and a 12-hour shift on December 29, 2017, which was the last day of his 20 contract. Plaintiff complained to two doctors at the hospital but his schedule did not change.
21 Plaintiff worked the 24-hour shift on December 28, 2017 and appeared for his final shift on 22 December 29, 2017 “out of a sense of duty because the hospital needed anesthesia coverage on 23 that day.” Id. at ¶¶ 13-15.

24 During breaks in between cases on his December 29 shift, Plaintiff “retired to his private 25 call room where he would rest or sleep.” After performing one procedure, a nurse told Plaintiff 26 that “a patient said his eyes were red” and informed him that “his speech sounded slurred.” Id. at 27 ¶ 15. He did not respond “because he was tired and did not believe it was necessary to explain his 28 private medical conditions,” including the fact that he wears a partial denture that can affect his

1 speech. Id. at ¶¶ 15, 23.

2 Later that day, while Plaintiff was taking a break, he heard a knock on the door to his 3 private room. When he opened it, Tornabene and two nurses were waiting. One nurse asked, “Do 4 you know who I am?” to which Plaintiff responded yes. Another “asked if he was feeling okay,” 5 and Plaintiff answered yes. After they left, Plaintiff went back to sleep. Id. at ¶ 16.

6 Plaintiff alleges that Tornabene then “made a determination that plaintiff was under the 7 influence of either drugs or alcohol even though she did not physically examine [him] or give him 8 a blood test.” Id. at ¶ 17. Tornabene contacted the County Sheriff’s Department “to provide 9 security to remove plaintiff from the hospital.” When Deputy Sheriff Brian Cain arrived, 10 Tornabene told Cain “that although she believed plaintiff was under the influence of drugs or 11 alcohol, she did not want him to arrest or prosecute plaintiff,” and that “instead of arresting 12 plaintiff, [Cain] should escort him out of the hospital and put him in a taxi,” and that Plaintiff 13 “should not be permitted to drive himself home.” Id. “Tornabene told Cain she also desired his 14 presence as security if plaintiff became ‘confrontational’ when she told him he was being 15 removed.” Id.

16 Cain requested assistance, and then-Sergeant Angela D. Prasad (now Lieutenant) arrived as 17 Cain’s supervisor. Cain and Prasad “agreed with Tornabene that they would follow her directions 18 in handling this matter.” Id. at ¶ 18. Cain knocked on Plaintiff’s door, waking him. When 19 Plaintiff opened the door he saw only Cain in his uniform. Cain closed the door slightly so that 20 only Cain and Plaintiff could see each other, and “[i]n a firm tone of voice” said “‘come out here’ 21 because he wished to speak with [Plaintiff].” Id. at ¶ 19. As Plaintiff was tired “and had been 22 sleeping partially undressed,” he “asked Cain to enter the room and talk there while he got 23 dressed.” Cain said, “[n]o, you come out’ because Tornabene wished to speak with” Plaintiff.
24 Plaintiff then closed the door and started to dress. Id. After a few minutes, Cain became impatient 25 and pounded his fist on the door, yelling “with an angry tone of voice . . . ‘Come on, let’s go!’” 26 Id. at ¶ 20. Plaintiff, who was “fearful of any potential encounters with law enforcement” and did 27 not want to give Cain “any reason to suspect he was disobeying his command, being 28 uncooperative, or hiding something,” immediately complied and opened the door, even though he

1 was still getting dressed. Id.

2 When Plaintiff exited the room, he saw Cain, Prasad, Tornabene, at least one nurse, and a 3 person who appeared to be a private security guard. Tornabene told Plaintiff that “his services 4 were no longer needed and another physician was assigned to finish his shift. She also told 5 plaintiff he would not be allowed to drive himself home,” and “said the deputies would put him in 6 a taxi and she would give him a prepaid voucher to pay the driver.” Id. at ¶ 21. At some point 7 during this encounter Plaintiff “realized he was suspected of being under the influence of drugs” 8 and “stated he did not use drugs.” Id. at ¶ 22. He also asked why his services were being 9 terminated. “Tornabene stated he did not appear as if he could work,” and “stated that his speech 10 appeared to be slurred.” Id. at ¶ 23. Plaintiff explained that he has a partial denture to replace 11 some of his upper teeth, and that he uses his tongue to keep it in place when he is resting or 12 sleeping. He explained that in those situations, his speech appears to be slurred, and he took out 13 his partial denture to show it to Tornabene and the others. Id.

14 Tornabene also stated that Plaintiff “appeared to have difficulty walking.” He then “pulled 15 up his pant leg and revealed the psoriasis on his right leg” and the “surgery scar on his right 16 ankle.” Id. at ¶ 24. Plaintiff “explained that he had screws surgically installed in his ankle to 17 repair a fracture and that the pain caused him to limp when he was required to stand or walk for 18 long periods.” Id. Despite Plaintiff’s explanations, “Tornabene stated plaintiff still had to leave 19 and take a taxi.” Id. In response, Plaintiff stated that he did not want to take a taxi and would 20 drive himself home. “One of the deputies told plaintiff they would not permit him to drive home,” 21 and that Plaintiff “would be escorted out of the hospital and put into a taxi pursuant to 22 Tornabene’s request.” Id. at ¶ 25.

23 Plaintiff continued to “proclaim his innocence,” to no avail. He then asked Tornabene to 24 give him a drug test in the hospital’s laboratory, pursuant to the hospital’s “protocol requiring the 25 testing for substance abuse of any physician who is suspected of being under the influence while 26 on duty.” Tornabene refused. Id. at ¶ 26. Plaintiff then asked the deputies to give him a drug, 27 alcohol, or sobriety test, which they refused. Id. at ¶ 27. Neither deputy performed any 28 investigation, such as asking Plaintiff if he had consumed any alcohol or drugs, examining his

1 eyes, attempting to smell his breath, or search Plaintiff's person, property, or room for drugs or 2 alcohol. Defendants Cain and Prasad "had a duty to conduct an adequate investigation and 3 establish independent probable cause because plaintiff gave plausible explanations for his 4 perceived behavior and he demanded a drug test multiple times," but instead "impermissibly 5 substituted Tornabene's judgment for their own." Id.

6 Accompanied by Cain, Plaintiff went to the locker room to get dressed. He packed his 7 luggage in front of Cain and displayed to him the contents, which did not include any contraband.
8 He also showed Cain his swollen hands and explained that he had rheumatoid arthritis. Id. at ¶ 28.

9 Plaintiff was unable to find his car keys or his cell phone and returned to his room to 10 search for them. He alleges that Prasad, who had been "rushing Cain and plaintiff to leave 11 because she had 'somewhere to go,'" became "irritated and more forceful," rushing Plaintiff. Id.
12 at ¶ 29. After being escorted to the lobby with Cain and the guard, Plaintiff and Cain exited the 13 building to search Plaintiff's vehicle for his car keys. The guard remained in the lobby with his 14 luggage and Prasad remained in the building. Id. at ¶ 32.

15 Plaintiff and Cain searched Plaintiff's car for the keys without success. Plaintiff then 16 "informed Cain he was going to sit in the driver's seat and press the ignition button to see if the 17 keys were in the vehicle. If the vehicle started, the keys were somewhere inside the vehicle." Id.
18 at ¶ 33. According to Plaintiff, "Cain said nothing and walked to the driver's side" of the car next 19 to Plaintiff, who was sitting in the driver's seat. Plaintiff pushed the ignition button and the 20 vehicle started. "Cain suddenly lunged at plaintiff, twisting his hand and wrist into a martial arts 21 submission hold." Cain then "dragged plaintiff out of the vehicle by his hand and wrist and forced 22 his arm behind his back." Id. Plaintiff, who suffered "extreme physical pain throughout his 23 hands, wrist, elbow, arm, and shoulder . . . screamed in pain and yelled 'What are you doing?!'" 24 Id. at ¶ 34. Cain replied that Plaintiff "was trying to get away and that his keys were in his 25 pocket." Plaintiff replied that they were not, and Cain instructed Plaintiff to move away from the 26 car. Plaintiff complied, and Cain sat in the driver's seat and started the car. He then found 27 Plaintiff's keys underneath the car seat. Id. Plaintiff and Cain then returned to the hospital lobby, 28 and Prasad gave Plaintiff his cell phone. Plaintiff traveled to his hotel by taxi. He later returned to

1 the hospital and retrieved his car without incident. Id. at ¶ 34.

2 Plaintiff took a substance abuse panel drug test on January 25, 2018, which tested for signs 3 of drug use for the previous 90 days. The test results were negative. Id. at ¶ 35.

4 He later learned that “certain physicians and nurses in the hospital’s anesthesia department 5 harbored racial animus towards him as an African American.” Id. at ¶ 36. Another doctor 6 informed Plaintiff that Dr. Jeffrey Saadi, the Chief of Anesthesia, and hospital nurses used a racial 7 slur to refer to Plaintiff. Id. Plaintiff alleges that “Tornabene, in conjunction with Saadi and some 8 nurses, conspired to set up plaintiff to be terminated at the end of his shift,” and that Tornabene 9 “retaliated against plaintiff for complaining about his assigned shifts and because she and others in 10 the hospital harbored racial animus against him as an African American.” Id. at ¶ 37. He further 11 alleges that Tornabene caused Plaintiff to be assigned the 36-hour shift on his final two days 12 despite his complaints, knowing that “such a demanding shift would weaken him and make it 13 appear as if he was under the influence of drugs or alcohol, especially in light of his medical 14 conditions which she had knowledge of.” Id. She “intentionally gave Cain and the deputies false 15 and misleading information regarding plaintiff’s sobriety,” even though she knew the reasons for 16 his slurred speech and difficulty walking. Id. Following the incident, Tornabene prepared the 17 hospital’s report of Plaintiff to the state medical board for physician misconduct but made no 18 mention of drugs or alcohol. Id. at ¶ 41.

19 The amended complaint alleges the following five claims for relief: 1) a 42 U.S.C. § 1983
20 claim for violation of the Fourth Amendment against Cain, Prasad, and Tornabene based on Cain 21 and Prasad’s seizure of Plaintiff and Cain’s use of force on Plaintiff; 2) a section 1983 claim for 22 violation of the Fourteenth Amendment against Cain, Prasad, and Tornabene based on the seizure 23 and use of force; 3) assault and battery against Cain, Prasad, and the County; 4) intentional 24 infliction of emotional distress against Cain, Prasad, and the County; and 5) negligence against 25 Cain, Prasad, and the County.

26 Defendants now move to dismiss.

27 II. LEGAL STANDARD

28 A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) tests the legal sufficiency of the claims alleged in

1 the complaint. See Parks Sch. of Bus., Inc. v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995).
2 When reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must “accept as true all
3 of the factual allegations contained in the complaint,” Erickson, 551 U.S. at 94 (2007) (citation 4 omitted), and may dismiss a claim “only where there is no cognizable legal theory” or there is an 5 absence of “sufficient factual matter to state a facially plausible claim to relief.” Shroyer v. New 6 Cingular Wireless Servs., Inc., 622 F.3d 1035, 1041 (9th Cir. 2010) (citing Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556
7 U.S. 662, 677-78 (2009); Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001)) (quotation marks 8 omitted). A claim has facial plausibility when a plaintiff “pleads factual content that allows the 9 court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.”
10 Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citation omitted). In other words, the facts alleged must demonstrate 11 “more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action 12 will not do.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 554, 555 (2007) (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 13 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)); see Lee v. City of L.A., 250 F.3d 668, 679 (9th Cir. 2001), overruled on 14 other grounds by Galbraith v. Cty. of Santa Clara, 307 F.3d 1119 (9th Cir. 2002).

15 III. DISCUSSION

16 Defendants move to dismiss all claims against Tornabene and Prasad; the Fourteenth 17 Amendment claim in its entirety; and the Fourth Amendment claim against Cain to the extent that 18 it is based on the allegation that Plaintiff was seized when he was ordered to leave the hospital and 19 forced to take a taxi.

20 A. Fourteenth Amendment Claim

21 In his opposition, Plaintiff clarified that his Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment claims are 22 each based on the same three individual violations: 1) “forcing and escorting plaintiff out of the 23 hospital for fraudulent reasons without justification”; 2) “forcing plaintiff to take a taxi against his 24 will without justification”; and 3) Cain’s excessive use of force. Opp’n 2. He contends that all 25 three violations were seizures. Id.

26 “[I]f a constitutional claim is covered by a specific constitutional provision . . . the claim 27 must be analyzed under the standard appropriate to that specific provision, not under the rubric of 28 substantive due process.” Cty. of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 843 (1998). Claims for

1       unreasonable seizures and excessive force fall within the Fourth Amendment. Terry v. Ohio, 392
2       U.S. 1, 9 (1968); Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 395 (1989). As Plaintiff has explained that his 3       Fourteenth Amendment claims are based on the same three violations that he asserts under the 4       Fourth Amendment for unreasonable seizure and excessive force, his Fourteenth Amendment 5       claims are dismissed with prejudice.

6       B.     Fourth Amendment Claims

7       Section 1983 creates a civil cause of action against a “person who, under color of any 8       statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State” deprives another person of any of 9       their “rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws.” 42 U.S.C. § 1983.
10      To state a claim under section 1983, a plaintiff must allege two essential elements: (1) that a right 11      secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States was violated and (2) that the alleged 12      violation was committed by a person acting under the color of state law. See West v. Atkins, 487 13      U.S. 42, 48 (1988); Ketchum v. Alameda Cty., 811 F.2d 1243, 1245 (9th Cir. 1987).

14      As noted, Plaintiff’s Fourth Amendment claims against Tornabene, Cain, and Prasad are 15      based on three individual violations: 1) “forcing and escorting plaintiff out of the hospital for 16      fraudulent reasons without justification”; 2) “forcing plaintiff to take a taxi against his will without 17      justification”; and 3) Cain’s use of excessive force. Opp’n 2.

18      Defendants argue that the first two alleged violations are not seizures within the meaning 19      of the Fourth Amendment, and that even if they were seizures, Defendants are entitled to qualified 20      immunity. They also argue that Tornabene and Prasad cannot be held liable for Cain’s use of 21      force. The court will address each individual violation in turn.

22       1.     Forcing Plaintiff to Leave the Hospital

23      “The Fourth Amendment prohibits ‘unreasonable searches and seizures’ by the 24      Government.” United States v. Arvizu, 534 U.S. 266, 273 (2002) (citing Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S.
25      1, 9 (1968)). “A person is seized by the police and thus entitled to challenge the government’s 26      action under the Fourth Amendment when the officer, ‘by means of physical force or show of 27      authority,’ terminates or restrains his freedom of movement, through means intentionally applied.”
28      Brendlin v. California, 551 U.S. 249, 254 (2007) (internal citations and quotation omitted);

1 emphasis removed); see also United States v. Smith, 633 F.3d 889, 892 (9th Cir. 2011) (holding 2 that “a person is not ‘seized’ within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment unless “by means of 3 physical force or show of authority, his freedom of movement is restrained.”” (quoting United 4 States v. Mendenhall, 446 U.S. 544, 553 (1980)). “[I]n order to determine whether a particular 5 encounter constitutes a seizure, a court must consider all the circumstances surrounding the 6 encounter to determine whether the police conduct would have communicated to a reasonable 7 person that the person was not free to decline the officers’ requests or otherwise terminate the 8 encounter.” Florida v. Bostick, 501 U.S. 429, 439 (1991). Under Terry and its progeny, a 9 temporary seizure is reasonable under the Fourth Amendment if law enforcement officers have 10 “reasonable suspicion”—that is, “articulable suspicion that a person has committed or is about to 11 commit a crime.” Florida v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491, 498 (1983).

12 Plaintiff argues that Cain and Prasad ordered him to leave the hospital, and that based on 13 their “show of authority and command, plaintiff complied because he did not believe he could 14 have terminated the encounter or declined the deputies’ command to leave” by returning to his 15 private room. Opp’n 2-3. Given these circumstances, he argues that the FAC alleges a seizure 16 within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. At the hearing, Plaintiff’s counsel confirmed that 17 the FAC does not allege that anyone used physical force when requiring Plaintiff to leave the 18 hospital.

19 Plaintiff does not cite any cases to support his theory that Defendants’ command to leave 20 the hospital, unaccompanied by force, constituted a seizure.<sup>2</sup> The court was unable to find any 21 Ninth Circuit authority on the issue of whether a state actor’s “command to leave” a public place, 22 unaccompanied by force or threats of force, constitutes a seizure, but at least two other circuits
23 have considered the question. In Bennett v. City of Eastpointe, 410 F.3d 810, 834 (6th Cir. 2005), 24 the Sixth Circuit held that a plaintiff could maintain a claim for unlawful seizure where he alleged 25 that an officer “ordered him to walk his bicycle out of [a suburb] back to [the neighboring city],

27 <sup>2</sup> The court analyzes only whether Plaintiff’s allegations that he was forced to leave the hospital 28 constitutes a “seizure” under the Fourth Amendment. The court does not reach the question of whether Plaintiff adequately alleged that Defendants lacked reasonable suspicion to support the alleged seizure.

1 and then ‘escorted’ him there,” where the officer “watched him cross [the dividing road] Eight 2 Mile to ensure that he complied” but did not physically escort him into the neighboring city.
3 According to the Sixth Circuit, “Fourth Amendment jurisprudence suggests a person is seized not 4 only when a reasonable person would not feel free to leave an encounter with police, but also 5 when a reasonable person would not feel free to remain somewhere, by virtue of some official 6 action.” Id. (emphasis in original).

7 The Second Circuit reached a different conclusion in Sheppard v. Beerman, 18 F.3d 147, 8 153 (2d Cir. 1994). In Sheppard, the court held that the plaintiff, a law clerk, had not alleged a 9 seizure for purposes of the Fourth Amendment where he alleged that he was “removed from 10 chambers by court officers” after being fired by a judge and was “not allowed to take his 11 belongings with him.” Id. at 150. The court held that the plaintiff’s removal was not a seizure 12 because he “was ‘free to go anywhere else that he desired,’ with the exception of [the judge’s] 13 chambers and the court house.” Id. at 153. The Second Circuit subsequently affirmed its holding 14 in Salmon v. Blessing, 802 F.3d 249, 253 (2d Cir. 2015):

15 Police officers frequently order persons to leave public areas: crime 16 scenes, accident sites, dangerous construction venues, anticipated 17 flood or fire paths, parade routes, areas of public disorder, etc. A 18 person may feel obliged to obey such an order. Indeed, police may 19 take a person by the elbow or employ comparable guiding force short of actual restraint to ensure obedience with a departure order. Our precedent does not view such police conduct, without more, as a seizure under the Fourth Amendment as long as the person is otherwise free to go where he wishes.

20 (citing Sheppard, 18 F.3d at 153). The court in Salmon concluded, however, that “the intentional 21 use of physical force to restrain the person and control the movements of a compliant person 22 certainly does” transform an “encounter, even if only briefly, into a detention, which qualifies as a 23 seizure of [an individual’s] person.” Salmon, 802 F.3d at 254. Notably, the Sixth Circuit’s 24 approach may now be more in line with the Second Circuit, for the Sixth Circuit recently agreed 25 with the court in Salmon and held that a person is not seized under the Fourth Amendment when 26 ordered to leave a place and escorted out by officers who use force that does not “exceed guiding 27 force.” Youkhanna v. City of Sterling Heights, 934 F.3d 508, 523-24 (6th Cir. 2019) (citing 28 Salmon, 802 F.3d at 253).

1        Although it appears that the Ninth Circuit has not considered this question, at least one 2        district court in this circuit has applied Sheppard and granted summary judgment on a Fourth 3        Amendment unlawful seizure claim, holding that no seizure occurred where the plaintiff had been 4        “escorted” out of a courthouse by security officers “without any force whatsoever.” Price v.
5        Peerson, No. CV 13-3390 PSG (JEMx), 2014 WL 12579823, at *8 (C.D. Cal. May 15, 2014).

6        The court need not determine whether the Ninth Circuit would adopt the Sixth Circuit’s 7        approach in Bennett and Youkhanna or the Second Circuit’s decisions in Sheppard and Salmon, 8        because it concludes that dismissal of the claim on the basis of qualified immunity is appropriate.

9        “[Q]ualified immunity protects government officials ‘from liability for civil damages 10        insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of 11        which a reasonable person would have known.’” Moss v. U.S. Secret Serv., 675 F.3d 1213, 1222 12        (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 231 (2009)). Where “defendants 13        assert qualified immunity in a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), ‘dismissal is not appropriate 14        unless [the court] can determine, based on the complaint itself, that qualified immunity applies.’” 15        O’Brien v. Welty, 818 F.3d 920, 936 (9th Cir. 2016) (quoting Groten v. California, 251 F.3d 844, 16        851 (9th Cir. 2001)).

17        The qualified immunity analysis involves two inquiries. First, taken in the light most 18        favorable to the plaintiff, the court must ask whether the facts alleged show that the officer’s 19        conduct violated a constitutional right. Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201 (2001). If the answer is 20        “no,” then the court need not inquire further before ruling that the officer is entitled to qualified 21        immunity. Id. If, however, “a violation could be made out on a favorable view of the parties’ 22        submissions,” the court must examine “whether the [constitutional] right was clearly established.” 23        Id. The court may exercise its discretion in deciding “which of the two prongs of the qualified 24        immunity analysis should be addressed first in light of the circumstances in the particular case at 25        hand.” Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 236 (2009).

26        “The linchpin of qualified immunity is the reasonableness of the official’s conduct.” 27        Rosenbaum v. Washoe Cty., 663 F.3d 1071, 1075 (9th Cir. 2011) (citation omitted). “The 28        relevant, dispositive inquiry in determining whether a right is clearly established is whether it

1 would be clear to a reasonable officer that his conduct was unlawful in the situation he 2 confronted.” Saucier, 533 U.S. at 202. “If the law did not put the officer on notice that his 3 conduct would be clearly unlawful, summary judgment based on qualified immunity is 4 appropriate.” Id. “A clearly established right is one that is ‘sufficiently clear that every 5 reasonable official would have understood that what he is doing violates that right.’” Mullenix v.
6 Luna, 136 S. Ct. 305, 308 (2015) (per curiam) (quoting Reichle v. Howards, 566 U.S. 658, 664
7 (2012)). The Supreme Court has cautioned that specificity in determining whether “the violative
8 nature of particular conduct is clearly established . . . is especially important in the Fourth 9 Amendment context, where the Court has recognized that it is sometimes difficult for an officer to 10 determine how the relevant legal doctrine . . . will apply to the factual situation the officer 11 confronts.” Mullenix, 136 S. Ct. at 308 (emphasis in original; quotation omitted). A court 12 determining whether a right was clearly established looks to “Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit 13 law existing at the time of the alleged act.” Community House, Inc. v. Bieter, 623 F.3d 945, 967 14 (9th Cir. 2010) (citing Osolinski v. Kane, 92 F.3d 934, 936 (9th Cir. 1996)). Finally, “[i]t is the 15 plaintiff who bears the burden of showing that the rights allegedly violated were clearly 16 established.” Shafer v. Cty. of Santa Barbara, 868 F.3d 1110, 1118 (9th Cir. 2017) (internal 17 quotation marks and citation omitted).

18 Without reaching the question of whether the conduct alleged in the FAC, including 19 Defendants “forcing and escorting plaintiff out of the hospital for fraudulent reasons without 20 justification,” shows that Plaintiff’s constitutional rights were violated, the court concludes that 21 Plaintiff cannot establish the second prong of the qualified immunity analysis. Plaintiff does not 22 identify any authority that would have put Defendants on notice that they could effect a seizure
23 within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment by ordering Plaintiff to leave the hospital 24 accompanied only by a “show of authority and command,” without any use of physical force.
25 Plaintiff argues that he need not identify Supreme Court or Ninth Circuit authority that would have 26 put Defendants on notice that their actions in ordering him to leave the hospital, without more, 27 constituted a seizure under the Fourth Amendment. Instead, he asserts that “[c]learly established 28 law is not always required” where there is a “clear violation” of an individual’s constitutional

1 rights. Opp'n 10-11. In support, he cites Rodriguez v. Swartz, 899 F.3d 719, 726-27 (9th Cir.
2 2018), in which the plaintiff alleged that “[a] U.S. Border Patrol agent standing on American soil
3 shot and killed a teenage Mexican citizen who was walking down a street in Mexico . . . [w]ithout 4 warning or provocation.” At the time of the shooting, the boy “was not committing a crime” and 5 “did not otherwise pose a threat to [the agent] or anyone else.” Id. at 727. The Ninth Circuit 6 affirmed the district court’s denial of qualified immunity, holding that the complaint alleged a 7 Fourth Amendment violation and that it was clearly established that the agent could not shoot the 8 boy in the circumstances alleged. Id. at 728, 732-33. The court rejected the agent’s argument that 9 at the time of the shooting, “it was not clearly established that he could not shoot someone on the 10 other side of the border,” holding that “[a]ny reasonable officer would have known, even without a 11 judicial decision to tell him so, that it was unlawful to kill someone—anyone—for no reason.” Id.
12 at 732-33. Similarly, in Hardwick v. County of Orange, 844 F.3d 1112, 1117 (9th Cir. 2017), the 13 Ninth Circuit rejected the defendants’ claim that “the specific granular right to be free from 14 deliberately fabricated evidence in civil child dependency proceedings where a parent’s or child’s 15 protected familial liberty interest is at stake had not yet been ‘clearly established’ prior to the 16 dependency proceeding at issue” in that case. Id. (emphasis in original). The court held that “[n]o 17 official with an IQ greater than room temperature in Alaska could claim that he or she did not 18 know that the conduct at the center of this case violated both state and federal law.” Id.

19 Rodriguez and other cases holding that a right may be clearly established despite “the lack 20 of a case on all fours” do not support Plaintiff’s position. See Rodriguez, 899 F.3d at 733. Unlike 21 the allegations in Rodriguez and Hardwick, the facts alleged in Plaintiff’s FAC do not establish 22 “conduct so clearly and obviously wrong that the conduct itself unmistakably ‘should have 23 provided [defendants] with some notice’ that their alleged conduct violated [Plaintiff’s] 24 constitutional rights.” Hardwick, 844 F.3d at 1120 (quoting Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 745 25 (2002)). At the time of the incident alleged in the FAC, there was no published Supreme Court or 26 Ninth Circuit case law that addressed whether an order to leave a place, unaccompanied by any 27 physical force, would be a seizure under the Fourth Amendment and thus unlawful in the absence 28 of reasonable suspicion that the recipient of the order has committed or is about to commit a

1 crime. The differing jurisprudence in the Second and Sixth Circuits further buttress the conclusion
2 that the conduct alleged by Plaintiff in this case was not “clearly and obviously wrong.” The court 3 concludes that the law was not clearly established at the time of the incident that Defendants could 4 effect a seizure in such circumstances. Defendants are thus entitled to qualified immunity on this 5 claim.<sup>3</sup>

6 2. Forcing Plaintiff to Depart the Hospital in a Taxi

7 Plaintiff next claims that Defendants violated the Fourth Amendment by “forcing plaintiff 8 to take a taxi against his will without justification.” Opp’n 2. Defendants argue that requiring 9 Plaintiff to take a taxi from the hospital does not constitute a seizure as a matter of law. The court 10 disagrees. Accepting the allegations in the FAC as true, the court concludes that Plaintiff has 11 alleged a seizure within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. In refusing to allow Plaintiff to 12 drive himself home in his car, Defendants “‘by means of physical force or show of authority,’ 13 terminate[d] or restrain[ed] [Plaintiff’s] freedom of movement.” See Brendlin, 551 U.S. at 254.
14 Further, Plaintiff alleges that he “did not believe he was free to decline the deputies’ commands to 15 leave the hospital and take a taxi, or terminate the encounter.” FAC ¶ 31; see Bostick, 501 U.S. at 16 439 (courts must “determine whether the police conduct would have communicated to a 17 reasonable person that the person was not free to decline the officers’ requests or otherwise 18 terminate the encounter.”).

19 Defendants assert that even if requiring Plaintiff to take a taxi constituted a seizure, they 20 are entitled to qualified immunity because there is no authority “that would have made it clear to 21 every reasonable hospital administrator and law enforcement officer that paying for a taxi for a 22 doctor showing signs of impairment to leave the hospital constituted a seizure or an unreasonable 23 seizure.” Reply 4. Defendants’ argument ignores the allegations in the complaint. At the time of 24 the incident, the law was clearly established that “a temporary seizure is reasonable under the

26

---

<sup>3</sup> In his opposition, Plaintiff argued that Tornabene is not entitled to qualified immunity because 27 she is a “private party,” even though the FAC alleges that Tornabene “was at all times mentioned 28 [in the FAC] the medical director” for the County-owned and operated hospital, and thus a County employee. See FAC ¶ 5. At the hearing, Plaintiff conceded that Tornabene was a state actor during the incident.

1      Fourth Amendment if law enforcement officers have ‘reasonable suspicion’—that is, ‘some 2      objective manifestation’ under the circumstances—that the person has committed, or is about to 3      commit, a crime.” United States v. Harger, 313 F. Supp. 3d 1082, 1087 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (citing 4      United States v. Cortez, 449 U.S. 411, 417 (1981), Terry, 392 U.S. at 30); see Gallegos v. City of 5      Los Angeles, 308 F.3d 987, 990 (9th Cir. 2002) (“The reasonable suspicion standard ‘is a less 6      demanding standard than probable cause,’ and merely requires ‘a minimal level of objective 7      justification.’” (quoting Illinois v. Wardlow, 528 U.S. 119, 123 (2000)). Further, “a seizure that is 8      lawful at its inception can violate the Fourth Amendment if its manner of execution unreasonably 9      infringes interests protected by the Constitution.” Illinois v. Caballes, 543 U.S. 405, 407 (2005).
10     In order to evaluate the reasonableness of a detention, courts must examine whether “the police 11     diligently pursued a means of investigation that was likely to confirm or dispel their suspicions 12     quickly, during which time it was necessary to detain” the individual challenging the detention.
13     United States v. Sharpe, 470 U.S. 675, 686 (1985).

14     Here, Plaintiff alleges that Tornabene contacted the Sheriff’s Department for assistance 15     and told Cain that “she believed plaintiff was under the influence of drugs or alcohol,” and that 16     “plaintiff should not be permitted to drive himself home.” FAC ¶ 17. However, by the time 17     Plaintiff departed the hospital in a taxi, he had “stated he did not use drugs” to Cain, Prasad, and 18     Tornabene; explained why his speech was slurred, including removing and showing his partial 19     denture to Defendants; explained the reason for his difficulty walking, including displaying his 20     right leg and ankle; and made multiple requests to Tornabene, Cain, and Prasad for a drug, 21     alcohol, or sobriety test. Id. at ¶¶ 22, 23, 24, 26-27. Plaintiff’s requests for a drug, alcohol, or 22     sobriety test were repeatedly denied, and Cain and Prasad took no action to independently confirm 23     Tornabene’s suspicions that Plaintiff was under the influence of drugs or alcohol, even failing to 24     ask him if he had consumed drugs or alcohol that day. Id. at ¶¶ 26-27. Under these 25     circumstances, and accepting these allegations as true, Plaintiff has stated a cognizable, albeit 26     limited claim that Defendants effectuated a seizure by making him take a taxi and refusing to let 27     him drive his own car without first performing an investigation which would have dispelled any 28     suspicion that he was under the influence of drugs or alcohol. See Gallegos, 308 F.3d at 991

1 (“The whole point of an investigatory stop, as the name suggests, is to allow police to investigate .
2 . . .” (emphasis in original)). Accordingly, dismissal of this claim based on qualified immunity is 3 denied. This denial is without prejudice to Defendants’ renewing the defense on a full record at 4 summary judgment. See Romero v. Cty. of Washoe, 602 Fed. Appx. 408, 409 (9th Cir. 2015) 5 (affirming denial of motion to dismiss with leave to pursue qualified immunity defense at 6 summary judgment).

7 3. Excessive Force

8 Defendants next argue that Tornabene and Prasad cannot be held liable for Cain’s alleged 9 excessive use of force, as neither was present when Cain used force on Plaintiff. They do not 10 challenge the excessive force claim as to Cain.

11 Generally, a government official is only liable for his or her own misconduct. Ashcroft v.
12 Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 677 (2009) (“In a § 1983 suit . . . where masters do not answer for the torts of 13 their servants—the term “supervisory liability” is a misnomer. Absent vicarious liability, each 14 Government official, his or her title notwithstanding, is only liable for his or her own 15 misconduct.”). However, an officer may be liable for conduct where there has been “integral 16 participation . . . in the alleged constitutional violation.” Torres v. City of Los Angeles, 548 F.3d 17 1197, 1206 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Chuman v. Wright, 76 F.3d 292, 294-95 (9th Cir. 1996)).
18 “[I]ntegral participation’ does not require that each officer’s actions themselves rise to the level of 19 a constitutional violation.” Boyd v. Benton Cty., 374 F.3d 773, 780 (9th Cir. 2004). It does, 20 however, require some fundamental involvement in the conduct that allegedly caused the 21 violation. Blankenhorn v. City of Orange, 485 F.3d 463, 481 n.12 (9th Cir. 2007). “A person 22 deprives another of a constitutional right within the meaning of section 1983, if he does an 23 affirmative act, participates in another’s affirmative acts, or omits to perform an act which he is 24 legally required to do that causes the deprivation of which the plaintiff complains.” Leer v.
25 Murphy, 844 F.2d 628, 633 (9th Cir. 1988) (quoting Johnson v. Duffy, 588 F.2d 740, 743 (9th Cir.
26 1978)) (internal quotations and alterations omitted). “The inquiry into causation must be 27 individualized and focus on the duties and responsibilities of each individual defendant whose acts 28 or omissions are alleged to have caused a constitutional deprivation.” Id. (citations omitted). The 1 Ninth Circuit has rejected the “team effort” standard that allows a jury to consider defendants’ 2 conduct together; the proper measure is “to base each individual’s liability on his own conduct.”

3 Hopkins v. Bonvicino, 573 F.3d 752, 769-70 (9th Cir. 2009) (holding that “integral participation” 4 requires “more participation” than where officer interviewed a witness, did not participate in the 5 unconstitutional search, and had conversations with officers who did conduct the search (citing 6 Chuman)); see also Boyd, 374 F.3d at 780 (rejecting “team effort” theory “because it allowed 7 liability to attach to ‘a mere bystander’ who had ‘no role in the unlawful conduct.’”).

8 Here, Plaintiff asserts that Prasad and Tornabene are liable for Cain’s excessive use of 9 force under an integral participation theory.<sup>4</sup> A law enforcement officer who does not personally 10 apply force may nonetheless be held liable for excessive force where the officer meaningfully 11 participated in the conduct that allegedly caused the violation. For example, in Blankenhorn, the 12 Ninth Circuit found that an officer was not entitled to summary judgment and could be held liable 13 under section 1983 as an integral participant where he arrived during a struggle between the 14 plaintiff and other officers and “grabbed and held” the plaintiff’s arm so that it could be 15 handcuffed, and in this manner, meaningfully participated in gaining control over the plaintiff, 16 culminating in another officer’s application of hobble restraints. Blankenhorn, 485 F.3d at 481 17 n.3, 12. An officer can also be held liable as an integral participant where he or she had an 18 opportunity to intervene and prevent or curtail the violation (e.g., enough time to observe what 19 was happening and intervene to stop it) but failed to do so. Sturgis v. Brady, No. C 08-5363 SBA 20 (PR), 2016 WL 924859, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 11, 2016) (citing Robins v. Meecham, 60 F.3d 21 1436, 1442 (9th Cir. 1995)).

22 Here, the FAC does not allege that either Tornabene or Prasad were present when Cain 23

24 <sup>4</sup> Plaintiff argued in his opposition that Tornabene may be held liable for Cain’s use of force 25 pursuant to a “joint participation” or “acting in concert” theory. Opp’n 5-6. However, the cases 26 Plaintiff cited address the circumstances under which a private party may be liable under section 27 1983. See, e.g., Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 153 (1970) (“a private party involved 28 in [a conspiracy to discriminate based on race], even though not an official of the State, can be liable under § 1983. Private persons, jointly engaged with state officials in the prohibited action, are acting under color of law for purposes of the statute.” (quotation omitted)). As noted above, the FAC alleges that Tornabene was “at all times” the hospital’s medical director, and thus a County employee. At the hearing, Plaintiff’s counsel conceded that the joint participation or acting in concert theories are not applicable to Tornabene because she is not a private actor.

1 “twist[ed] [Plaintiff’s] hand and wrist into a martial arts submission hold” and dragged him out of 2 his car. See FAC ¶ 33. However, Plaintiff asserts that both were integral participants in Cain’s 3 use of force. As to Tornabene, Plaintiff notes that she asked the officers to remove Plaintiff from 4 the hospital and directed them to put him in a taxi instead of permitting him to drive himself home.
5 Tornabene believed Plaintiff might become “confrontational” when being removed, see FAC ¶ 17, 6 and Plaintiff asserts that implicit in her directions was the understanding that the officers may need 7 to use force on Plaintiff if he did not comply with their directions. However, Plaintiff alleges that 8 Cain used force to pull him out of his car after Plaintiff pressed the ignition and started the car to 9 see if the keys were inside. There are no allegations that Tornabene knew that Cain and Plaintiff 10 were going to the parking lot to look for Plaintiff’s keys or that Plaintiff planned to attempt to start 11 the car to see if the keys were inside. Therefore, no facts suggest that Tornabene directed or 12 encouraged Cain’s use of force in that situation or otherwise meaningfully participated in his use 13 of force.

14 As to Prasad, Plaintiff argues that she is liable in her capacity as Cain’s supervising officer 15 for “fail[ing] to properly train Cain . . . on the proper use of force.” Opp’n 12. The Ninth Circuit 16 has held that a supervisor may be held liable in their individual capacity for a constitutional 17 violation committed by another if the supervisor “set in motion a series of acts by others, or 18 knowingly refused to terminate a series of acts by others, which he [or she] knew or reasonably 19 should have known, would cause others to inflict the constitutional injury.” Watkins v. City of 20 Oakland, Cal., 145 F.3d 1087, 1093 (9th Cir. 1998) (quoting Larez v. City of Los Angeles, 946 21 F.2d 630, 646 (9th Cir. 1991)). A supervisor may also be held liable “for his [or her] own 22 culpable action or inaction in the training, supervision, or control of his [or her] subordinates; for 23 his [or] her acquiescence in the constitutional deprivation . . . ; or for conduct that showed a 24 reckless or callous indifference to the rights of others.” Id. (quoting Larez, 946 F.2d at 646).

25 Here, the FAC contains no allegations that Prasad set in motion a series of acts that she 26 knew or should have known would cause Cain to use force on Plaintiff. Nor does it allege any 27 facts about Prasad’s “action or inaction in the training, supervision, or control” of Cain with 28 respect to the use of force or allege that she acquiesced in Cain’s use of force on Plaintiff. Like

1 Tornabene, the FAC does not allege that Prasad knew that Cain and Plaintiff were going to the 2 parking lot to look for Plaintiff's keys, was present when Cain and Plaintiff went to Plaintiff's car 3 to look for his keys, had any knowledge that Plaintiff planned to attempt to start the car to see if 4 the keys were inside, or knew that Cain would use force to remove Plaintiff from the car once the 5 engine started. The FAC also does not allege any facts about Cain's training in the use of 6 reasonable force.

7 Based on the foregoing, the court concludes that the FAC fails to state a claim for 8 excessive force against Tornabene and Prasad.

9 C. State Law Claims Against Prasad

10 The remaining state law claims are assault, battery, intentional infliction of emotional 11 distress, and negligence. Defendants move to dismiss each of these claims as alleged against 12 Prasad, arguing that such claims fail as a matter of law.

13 1. Assault and Battery

14 Plaintiff's assault and battery claims are based upon Cain's use of force on Plaintiff. FAC 15 ¶¶ 67-68.

16 The elements of a claim for assault under California law are that "(1) the defendant 17 threatened to touch the plaintiff in a harmful or offensive manner; (2) it reasonably appeared to the 18 plaintiff that the defendant was about to carry out the threat; (3) the plaintiff did not consent to the 19 defendant's conduct; (4) the plaintiff was harmed; and (5) the defendant's conduct was a 20 substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's harm." Avina v. United States, 681 F.3d 1127, 1130 21 (9th Cir. 2012) (citations omitted). A claim for battery under California law requires a plaintiff to 22 establish that "(1) the defendant touched the plaintiff or caused the plaintiff to be touched with the 23 intent to harm or offend the plaintiff; (2) the plaintiff did not consent to the touching; (3) the 24 plaintiff was harmed or offended by defendant's conduct; and (4) a reasonable person in plaintiff's 25 situation would have been offended by the touching." Id. at 1130-31.

26 Here, the FAC does not allege any facts to suggest that Prasad "threatened to touch" 27 Plaintiff "in a harmful or offensive manner" or that Prasad actually touched Plaintiff "with the 28 intent to harm or offend" him. At the hearing, Plaintiff asserted that Prasad may be held

1 vicariously liable for Cain’s assault and battery of Plaintiff because she failed to train Cain on the 2 proper use of force and directed him to follow Tornabene’s instructions to remove Plaintiff from 3 the hospital without conducting an independent investigation. He offered no support for either 4 theory. Further, as discussed above, the FAC alleges no facts about Cain’s training with respect to 5 the use of force. As to the second theory, there is no logical connection between Prasad’s alleged 6 direction to follow Tornabene’s instructions without conducting an investigation and Cain’s 7 alleged eventual assault and battery of Plaintiff. The court concludes that the FAC does not state a 8 claim for assault or battery against Prasad.

9 2. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

10 In order to state a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”) Plaintiff 11 must allege “(1) extreme and outrageous conduct by [Prasad] with the intention of causing, or 12 reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress”; (2) that Plaintiff “suffer[ed] 13 severe or extreme emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of the emotional 14 distress by [Prasad’s] outrageous conduct.” Hughes v. Pair, 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1050 (citations and 15 quotation marks omitted). “A defendant’s conduct is ‘outrageous’ when it is so ‘extreme as to 16 exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized community.’” Id. at 1051 (citations and 17 quotation marks omitted). Behavior “may be considered outrageous if a defendant . . . abuses a 18 relation or position which gives him power to damage the plaintiff’s interest.” Cole v. Fair Oaks 19 Fire Dept., 43 Cal. 3d 148, 155 n.7 (1987).

20 While Plaintiff’s IIED claim is based upon both Cain’s use of force and Prasad’s “personal 21 involvement in the unlawful seizure and assault” on Plaintiff, see FAC ¶ 76-79, the FAC alleges 22 that “Cain’s outrageous conduct was the actual and proximate cause of plaintiff’s emotional 23 distress.” It does not allege that Prasad’s own actions were “outrageous” or that they caused 24 Plaintiff’s emotional distress. Further, as discussed in connection with the assault and battery 25 claims, Plaintiff offers no authority that Prasad may be held liable for Cain’s own alleged 26 “outrageous conduct.” Accordingly, Plaintiff has not stated an IIED claim against Prasad.

27 3. Negligence

28 In order to establish a negligence claim, Plaintiff must plead “(1) a legal duty to use due

1 care; (2) a breach of that duty; and (3) injury that was proximately caused by the breach.” Knapps
2 v. City of Oakland, 647 F. Supp. 2d 1129, 1164 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (citing Ladd v. Cnty. of San 3 Mateo, 12 Cal.4th 913, 917 (1996)). Under California law, “police officers have a duty not to use 4 excessive force.” Id. (citing Munoz v. City of Union City, 120 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1101 (2004)).

5 Like the IIED claim, Plaintiff’s negligence claim is based upon both Cain’s alleged 6 excessive use of force and Prasad’s “personal involvement in the unlawful seizure and assault” on 7 Plaintiff. FAC ¶¶ 83, 85. However, the FAC alleges that only Cain owed Plaintiff a duty “to 8 exercise reasonable care under the circumstances.” Id. at ¶ 83. It does not allege that Prasad owed 9 Plaintiff a legal duty, that she breached any such duty, or that the breach proximately caused an 10 injury to Plaintiff. Further, Plaintiff offers no authority that Prasad may be held liable for Cain’s 11 own alleged negligence. The FAC thus fails to state a claim for negligence against Prasad.

12 IV. CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, Defendants’ motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in 14 part. Plaintiff’s Fourteenth Amendment claims are dismissed with prejudice. The following 15 claims are dismissed with leave to amend: Fourth Amendment claim against Tornabene, Cain, and 16 Prasad based on forcing Plaintiff to leave the hospital; Fourth Amendment claim against 17 Tornabene and Prasad based on Cain’s alleged excessive use of force; and assault and battery, 18 intentional infliction of emotional distress, and negligence claims against Prasad. Any second 19 amended complaint is due by no later than November 12, 2019.<sup>5</sup> Further, as discussed at the 20 hearing, Plaintiff is granted leave to allege a claim for defamation in the second amended 21 complaint. The second amended complaint must plead Plaintiff’s best case.

22 IT IS SO ORDERED.

26
27 <sup>5</sup> The court is granting Plaintiff additional time to file a second amended complaint in light of the 28 fact that Plaintiff’s counsel has been granted leave to withdraw from his representation of Plaintiff and Plaintiff is currently proceeding pro se in this matter. [See Docket No. 51.]
